CDKL5 is a seizure disorder which affects how the brain cells connect. It is named after the gene involved and is the result of a random alteration in the gene prior to birth. The seizures are difficult to control and most of the children affected have significant motor and cognitive delays, gastrointestinal problems and vision issues.

There are now over two thousand cases known in the world but more children and young adults are being diagnosed each week. The International Foundation for CDKL5 Research (IFCR) has been at the forefront of expanding awareness and the research efforts. The IFCR is a 501(c)(3) charitable organization with an all volunteer staff (parents!).

Please help us Shoot for the Moon this year in support of our kids!
